I used to have a fascination with arrogant characters, particularly in the serials that I watched. I found the arrogant attitudes of male characters towards female characters intriguing. Manik from my favorite series “Kaisi Hai Yaariyan” was my first and foremost crush. I was captivated by his character, attitude, and how he behaved towards Nandini, my favorite character.

Another memorable scene for me was in the show “Madhubala,” where RK displayed psychopathic behavior towards Madhu and used manipulation to win her love. I found the rugged and powerful demeanor of such men to be highly attractive. Even in movies, I had a fondness for psychopathic films.

However, if you were to ask me now in 2022, I would say that being attracted to these types of personalities may not be healthy. It can have negative effects on our daily lives and relationships. While these characters may seem appealing, they often exhibit toxic traits that can be harmful in real-life relationships.
